The Mr. David lesing pointed out, the Sheriff gently took him aside, addressed him by his proper name, which he acknowledged, and informed him that he was his prisoner by virtue of two warrants issued at the Instance of Col. P. S. Blount, one to keep the peace toward the said Blount, and the other for the adduction of the daughter of tha informant from the State of Alabama, with the intention of defilement. The law of Alabama makes this offense punishable by confinement in the penitentiary, and Col. A Mornon Addition.—A glance at the audience shows us that three-fourths of it is composed of women, all dresced with exceeding plainness, not to say coarseness, bull many of them axceedingly pretty or interesting in personal appearance, not withstarding these disadvantages. I was struck with the fact that all seemed to have brought their children with them. There were few among them without nursing infauts upon their knees. The exceeding youth of some of these mothers could not seeme attention. One, at least, who sat rear me, could scarcely have been 15 years older than her base, if even that. I sought the story of that tell tale countenances of his wast female assemblage. Generally, it was that of the "miserally happy"—the only phrase I know of to express the desired that. Some faw of the oldset among them seemed by payed as the content of the oldset among them seemed by the story of the oldset among them seemed by the story of the oldset among them seemed by the story of the oldset among them seemed by content of the Mannon system. Among the younger "isblers," however, the prevailing exprosion of contentance betrayed a listlessness and reckness, resulting from the absence of any future of the seems, resulting from the absence of any future of the seems, resulting from the absence of any future, the content of the Mannon system.
